L’Islam, Objet Médiatique

Country: France
Organisation responsible: Skoli
Period: Since 2015
Activity: Islam, media subject is a study of textual data on the treatment of Islam in the French press between 1997 and 2015.

Objectives

- Explaining the fluctuations that the subject of “Islam” undergoes in the French media landscape (event causalities-Islam).
- Highlighting similarities and differences between Le Monde, Le Figaro and Libération in their treatment of Islam at national and international levels.
- Moving on to a lexical and discursive analysis of the documents containing the terms “Islam” and “Muslim” in various periods for the purposes of examining the multiple frameworks and interpretative keys through which Islam is discussed.
- Analysing the behaviour, in the documents, of the terms that have constructed the media imaginary around Islam.

Description

In a corpus of thousands of articles published during this period in three French newspapers (Le Monde, Libération and Le Figaro), the study records, analyzes and interprets the evolution of the occurrences of the terms “Islam”, ”Muslim”, as well as words associated with them.

Beneficiaries

Journalists, Decision-makers, experts, civil society actors.
